Professor George Demko, Department of Geography, OSU, Moderator

This is the first of five topical seminars. Others to be announced.

Professor H. Yuan Tien's research interests center around Demography, Human Fertility, Urbanization, and Chinese Society. He has published numerous articles on these subjects over the past ten years, and three books, the most recent of which, China's Population Struggle, was published by The Ohio State University Press in 1973. Professor Tien, who was born in China, spent 3 1/2 months in China this year (April-August) and comes to us with fresh insights to the population problems facing China today.

Professor Warren Eason's fields of specialization include Soviet Population and Manpower, and Economics of the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. He has just completed a three-year project funded by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development entitled "Determinants of Population Growth in Imperial Russia and in the Soviet Union." He has travelled extensively in the Soviet Union, most recently in the Spring of 1973 at which time he met with demographers in various research institutes in Moscow and other cities. Consequently, he too brings to us the results of his personal observations and discussions.

Professor George Demko's major fields of research and publication are the Geography of the Soviet Union, and Population Geography. He is the author of three books, the most recent of which is a reader entitled Population Geography.

LECTURES

189 A lecture was held at Cleveland State University on November 6 entitled "East-West Relations: the Polish Approach." It was given by Professor Janusz Golebiowski, who holds the chair of contemporary politics with the Sociology Department at the University of Warsaw. It dealt with the role of Polish diplomacy as a mediator between, among other countries, the United States and the Peoples' Republic of China. The sponsors were the Department of Modern Languages, Eastern European Studies Committee, Polish-American Student Association, and Polish-American Radio Enterprises.

190 Professor Cornelia Bodea, a Senior Fulbright-Hays scholar from Rumania, now teaching at OSU, will lead a colloquium at Cleveland State University on the topic "The Rumanian National Movement." The meeting will begin at 2:00 P.M. on November 29 in UT 1916. The sponsors are the Department of History and the Eastern European Studies Program. Contact: Professor David Brodsky, Department of Modern Languages, CSU, Cleveland, OH, 44115. (216) 687-4645.

191 You are reminded of the lecture at Cleveland State University, "Indigenous Architecture from Eastern Europe and the Mediterranean" by Ms. Gayle Wimmer, Lecturer in Art, Hunter College, NYC, Tuesday, November 20 at 3:00 P.M. at CSU Main Classroom Building (MC) 101. Reception follows. The lecture will include slides of architecture from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Hungary, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Sicily, Sardinia, Greece, Tunisia, Morocco, and Algeria. The principal thesis of the lecture concerns the influence of climate and geography on indigenous forms. The lecture is sponsored by the CSU Assembly Committee, the Polish-American Student Association, the Art Department, the Department of Modern Languages, and the Eastern European Studies Committee. Contact: Professor David Brodsky, Department of Modern Languages, CSU, Cleveland, OH 44115. (216) 687-4645.

192 On Thursday, November 29 at 7:00 P.M., Mr. Gennady Fedosov, Cultural Counselor of the Embassy of the USSR, will speak on the Ohio State University campus in Hitchcock Hall, Room 131. His topic will be "Soviet-American Relations in the New Era." This lecture is part of the International Studies 230 course (Introduction to the Soviet Union). The public is invited. Mr. Fedosov's lecture is sponsored by the Center for Undergraduate International Studies and the Center for Slavic and East European Studies. Contact: Professor Jan Adams, OSU, 190 West 19th Avenue, Columbus, OH, 43210. (614) 422-9660.

Minutes for the Ohio Slavic and East European Conference
Fairfield High School, November 3, 1973
Submitted by David F. Robinson

OSEEC 3:15 p.m., Saturday, November 3, 1973, Fairfield High School, Fairfield, Ohio. 27 in attendance with Leon Twarog presiding. Professor Twarog commented on the close connection between Ohio AATSEEL and OSEEC. Sanford Steine from Devilbiss High School of Toledo spoke on the Introduction of Chinese and Russian Studies at the secondary school level in Toledo. The Chinese-Russian Center in Toledo was founded in 1966. This is a Cultural Historical and Language Center and serves the entire Toledo School System. It has its own building and it was refurbished with a $350,000 grant. Children from 9th to 11th grades come together from all over the city to take subjects at the center. No previous knowledge of these subjects is assumed. For History courses the students are given various text books with differing points of view which they must analyze. The students come to the classroom and must discuss what has been read; for example, "The Hero in History" on Peter the Great or other topics. Another topic might be Spheres of Influence. Visual materials are housed in the center and examinations are conducted in each area taught. There is strong emphasis on the cultural aspect of the areas studied. There has been a 500% increase since the funding of the center in the number of students who study Chinese and Russian. One-third of the center's students who have gone to college have majored in the areas they studied at the center and even for students who do not go on to college this experience is still a tremendous one for young people of this age when they are beginning socializing and learning about their own cultural background. Often the center's teachers have gone out to other areas of the city.

We believe we have been successful. Most programs of this type have been dropped but ours has survived for the following reasons: (1) The foresight of the people who established the program; the emphasis on developing a staff that was extremely interested in students. (2) The center grew from resources within the school system as it existed already. There was no imposition of outside teachers upon the existing ones. For example, the Afro-American program in Toledo did not work because they made this mistake. (3) Just plain luck. The late 60's were a period of rapid change when this program began and was widespread community support. We spoke to groups of all kinds including the American Legion. There is support from the school system, from the teachers union and from the community. Even though bold steps have been taken we have always sought input from everyone.

If any area of the state approaches those in this way similar programs, it seems to us, could be developed there also.

There was a question and answer period during which the following materials came up.

Russian to Chinese range students is about 3 to 2. The staff of the center includes 1 Russian teacher, 1 Chinese teacher, 1 History teacher, 1 secretary and 1/2 time librarian. We have a Russian dinner, a Russian dance, films, and all were discussed in class. We have 85 Russian students and 50 Chinese students. The teachers schedules were: Morning teach at the center; afternoon teach in their home high school. All students graduate from their local high school. The center pays for the half-time librarian and half-time administrator. All other costs come from other parts of the system such as the home high school. There were no prerequisites for any courses in the center. We recommend four years of language training for students in the center. Lectures to PTA groups tend to relieve the anxieties of parents of students in the center. This also permits the Board of Education to bask in the reflected glory of the center.

Ronald Smith spoke on the establishment of a center for source materials in Ohio. For maps, charts, slides, films, film strips, etc. Sanford Steine will send Ronald Smith a list of materials in the Chinese-Russian Center and also a list of other centers in the state. Ronald Smith will determine the policy on renting films from the OSU Film Library. The possibility of sharing rental film was discussed.

Visiting lecturers might be taped and tapes made available to other schools in Ohio together with a copy of slides used.

A report on recent federal legislation: OSU is one of 8 Slavic Centers funded by the federal government. These were Columbia, Yale, Pittsburgh, OSU, Michigan, Indiana, Washington and University of California at Berkeley. Formerly there were 20 such centers. This is called Phase 2. The story of the funding of these centers is complicated but it might briefly be summarized by saying that the administration had no money for Title VI then was passed by Congress, signed June 29, 1973 and contracts came September 27, 1973, three days before the deadline. For 1974 and 75 Congress has passed two bills and a conference committee will be necessary. The total number of centers in all areas (including Slavic) has been reduced from 106 to 55. There are some new centers in two year programs, for example, Denison University. The American Council on Education now has an international education section to monitor Federal Educational Developments and to serve as an information and lobbying agency. A special committee to study relationships between the government and education has Professor Twarog on its Steering Committee. The federal government is concerned with diffusion of information from the graduate level to college and lower levels so that by 1975-6 there will be less emphasis on graduate training and more on other levels including education of the ordinary citizen, and an area above at all levels in the country. Cooperative efforts on a state level will also be encouraged. Planning on the state level in Ohio: information from each of us is needed on time to permit wide dissemination of information in the state. For instance it has been reported that Kent State University has a film library but we are not sure how it works. Other things we might do include a survey of Ohio libraries to cover Russian History and Civilization. Perhaps through an OSEEN questionnaire Paul Horecky of the library of Congress is editing a survey of national holdings in East Central and South Slavic areas.

The Ohio Academy of History is meeting April 5 and 6, 1974. We must avoid a conflict with OSEEC and OMLTA.

There is a possibility of developing programs for high school teachers to study and travel in Poland. OSU is having a faculty seminar on Russia and China on November 26, 7 to 10 p.m. called "Problems and Population". It includes mostly speakers from outside OSU.

Meeting adjourned at 5:00 p.m.
